Omnibus Business in New York .- An omnibus driver communicates some interesting statistics to the Evening Post, as follows: We have 376 licensed omnibuses now running, owned by some dozen or more different proprietors. Each omnibus costs, new, $550, making their aggregate $10 a day, and $3,000 a year. The whole earn $3,760 per day, and $1,128,000 a year. Their expenses are always rated at $5 each, per day, and $1,500 a year, making the aggregate cost of the whole and $1,500 a year; and the net profit of all the omnibuses in the city is $564,000.

To earn $10 a day, each carriage must make eight trips, down and back, with an average 60,160 passengers daily. Thus you will perceive the number who daily take a ride in the omnibus exceeds the largest vote ever polled by both parties at any election in this city;

nibus. There are six horses worked on each omnibus daily; on all 2,256. The distance travel--376 in all. They receive $1 per day wages, which is about $300 a year. Each omnibus pays a license to the city of $20 a year, from which a revenue accrues annually of NOTICE. THE subscriber thinks he has given as much indulgence to those in his debt as they ought to require. He has made up his mind, that all amounts due him of $100 and under, that remain unpaid January 1, 1850, will be put in the hands of an officer for collection. All over that amount remaining unpaid February 1, 1850, will be sued at the following March Court. He earnestly hopes that those in his debt will not compel him to resort to such an unpleasant mode of collecting, JOHN DAWSON.
